Sports Tuned Chassis

The Volvo XC90 V8 Sport have a specially tuned chassis that separates this vehicle from the crowd—most notably in the corners. The front suspension uses McPherson struts with anti-dive and anti-lift functionality. The multi-link independent rear suspension is attached to a steel subframe. The front and rear both have firmer shocks and stiffer anti-roll bars for added stability and quicker steering response.

High Traction Road Holding

Volvo XC90 V8 SPORT is fitted with a sport-tuned chassis that keeps the wheels firmly on the ground. The high-traction road-holding ability comes from a specially tuned suspension system that gives the driver more control over the vehicle. The result is improved handling and better stability on all types of roads.

Dynamic Stability and Traction Control (DSTC)

The DSTC system increases the road-handling capabilities still further by sensing and counteracting loss of traction. And should you be forced to make an extreme maneuver, the active Roll Stability Control system helps keep the vehicle on an even keel. This system acts immediately to counter the roll tendency and to help restore the balance of the vehicle.

Servotronic Power Steering

Servotronic power steering uses sophisticated, speed-sensitive technology to regulate the steering effort at the wheel. As you change speed, the steering effort changes in response to your driving conditions. For example, at high speeds, the steering lightens, which makes it easier to steer. At lower speeds, the steering becomes heavier, which helps improve road feel and handling response.

Safety First

The XC90 V8 SPORT is very responsive to driver input, whether you’re accelerating smoothly, braking firmly, or cornering precisely. It’s also equipped with a wealth of safety features to help keep you and your passengers safe. This includes features like ABS, ESC, and airbags. In addition, the XC90 V8 SPORT is equipped with Volvo’s City Safety system, which can help prevent collisions by automatically applying the brakes in certain situations.
